Baltimore Mediation's Newsletter & Tips

November 2019

A WORD FROM LOUISE

Welcome November! I do so love this time of year when family comes together! It's the perfect time to be grateful and get everything out on the table, in every way that is good for well-being! As you gather with loved ones tomorrow, what would you like to talk about, what would you like to get off your chest, what would you like to reconnect about? Consider doing it Relationally! Be yourself in a generous, humble, and kind way. You might find that there's a serenity in choosing to be relational. Try it!

Sending love

Louise

GRATITUDE.... ACCOLADES, HIGH FIVES!

Relational Medicine: Louise Phipps Senft Appointed to Maryland Board of Physicians

October Training Highlights: Sources of Conflict, A Systems Approach

Baltimore Mediation welcomed consummate professionals from Under Armor, Morgan State University, and the Federal Aviation Administration to our October 40-hour Mediation and Conflict Transformation Skills Training.

Louise and our team of transformative mediators taught participants how to conquer conflict in various settings via simulated role plays and hands on coaching. Using relational theory, each participant sharpened their skillset and discovered their style as a mediator.

Client Had to Say:

“As my marriage proceeds forward toward divorce, I am reminded that it would not have happened as quickly and efficiently without our mediation appointment with [Louise Phipps Senft].

Your professional, kind and understanding demeanor left me feeling not one bit judged in the decision I was making to leave our relationship because ultimately we were not the best versions of ourselves together. Your services were very much appreciated.”

What Do Training Participants Think?

"I cannot thank Louise enough for the indispensable life and professional learnings you shared with us over the five-day mediation training. She drew on all of her considerable skills as a communicator, mediator, coach, and trainer, and imparted to us, in an incredibly creative variety of ways, the specific attitudes and skills required to help people transform conflict by improving the quality of their interactions. As a mediator and trainer involved in bringing transformative mediation to the workplace in Quebec, I come away strengthened in my understanding, not only of the theoretical underpinnings, but of the hands-on, nuts-and-bolts, down-to-earth specific moves of this powerful way to be and interact with people in conflict." - John Peter Weldon, Mediator, Trainer, and Lawyer

Here's What a Business Facilitation Client Had to Say:

"Baltimore Mediation offered us a transformative approach that believed in each of our capacities and what was possible. They helped us get through a difficult merger and business break up, gave us a working document that clearly summed things up in a succinct way, all from us but synthesized by our Baltimore Mediation mediator. And we have a signed agreement that we stand by and it works!"
